ties in CSMA for both scheduling and congestion control by means of a novel optimization problem and its relation to certain reversible networks. The result is a totally distributed algorithm. They conjecture it to be throughput optimal and utility maximizing for scheduling and congestion control re-spectively. In [30], the authors use a suggestion by Shah to adjust the access probabilities ...

Scheduling And Congestion Control For Wireless And

Abstract In this book, we consider the problem of achieving the maximum throughput and utility in a class of networks with resource-sharing constraints. This is a classical problem of great importance. In the context of wireless networks, we first propose a fully distributed scheduling algorithm that achieves the maximum throughput. Inspired by ...

Scheduling and Congestion Control for Wireless and Relying on this novel design-space oriented approach, the author develops joint TCP congestion control and wireless-link scheduling schemes for wireless applications over Internet with centralized and distributed (multi-hop) wireless links. Different from the existing solutions, the proposed schemes can be asynchronously implemented without message passing among network nodes; thus they are ...

work with congestion control and scheduling constraints. Before describing the details of our approach, we first discuss related work addressing various aspects of the network resource allocation problem. 1.1. Related Work. There is a very rich literature on congestion control and scheduling. The literature on congestion control has been primarily driven by bandwidth allocation in the context ...

scheduling schemes for both real-time and best effort services, whereas in ad-hoc networks, we propose channel aware congestion control schemes for best effort services. We begin with the performance evaluation of IEEE 802.16 networks by conducting experiments in the current deployed IEEE 802.16 networks of a leading telecom operator in India. We observe that (i) the throughput of Transmission ...
