Next, we scale up the criterion for scission of a single chain to a criterion for crack propagation in an elastomeric body at the continuum level. Our objective is to create a fracture criterion that is rooted in the micro-mechanics of polymer networks, and yet is consistent with fracture mechanics in the limit of macroscopic sized flaws. Fracture is a size-dependent phenomenon, so we expect a ...

Membrane scission is essential for intracellular trafficking. While BAR domain proteins such as endophilin have been reported in dynamin-independent scission of tubular membrane necks, the cutting mechanism has yet to be deciphered.
