This research monograph has the following main theme. Given an interpolation function, which is supposed to determine an estimate of the unknown signal value, the reader can use the traditional approach (traditional interpolation function) to estimate the numerical value of the signal.

The classic-resilient-curvature hybrid signal reconstruction (interpolation) formula is defined on a pixel-by-pixel basis depending on which one of the two: $\hat{I}^{\text{TM}}(x)$ or $R(x)$, in 1D, $\hat{I}^{\text{TM}}(x, y)$ or $R(x, y)$...

SRE - Sub-pixel Efficacy Region & SRI - Signal Resilient

The intensity-curvature measurement approaches were: 1) the signal resilient to interpolation (SRI); 2) the resilient curvature (RC). This work shows evidence that the SRI and the RC were able to provide information about the tumours. The evidence consisted of: 1) the capability of the signal resilient to interpolation to smooth or to illuminate the MRI; 2) the capability of the resilient ...

The results revealed that the classic-curvature, the signal resilient to interpolation and the intensity-curvature functional are able to add additional information useful to the diagnosis carried out with MRI. The contribution to the MRI diagnosis of our study are: (i) the enhanced gray level scale of the tumor mass and the well-behaved representation of the tumor provided through the signal ...
