What does HPV testing have to do with Pap tests? Pap tests check for changes in the cells of your cervix. These changes are important when they are the kind that could turn into cervical cancer over time. Women with these cell changes are followed and treated if needed so that cervical cancer does not develop. Hundreds of women's lives are saved every year in Alberta because of Pap tests ...

Women nearly universally display a social behavior with men they like that's often referred to as "testing." Testing is what women do when they're looking to see if a man is strong and congruent with himself; in other words, if he really is all the man he's presenting himself to be. Asking a man to do something for her, or teasing him with ...

The major purpose of hypothesis testing is to choose between two competing hypotheses about the value of a population parameter. For example, one hypothesis might claim that the wages of men and women are equal, while the alternative might claim that men make more than women. C. The hypothesis actually to be tested is usually given the symbol H_0 , and is commonly referred to as the null ...
